Specialty Dry Gold and Silver
All you to add sparkle and richness to a design, mimicking a foil look.

Specialty Dry White
White Embellishments allow you to make darker media your canvas. White underlays make other colours stand out.

Specialty Dry High Gloss Clear
Clear Embellishments with Specialty Dry inks, amplify content with eye-catching clear spots that pop off the page. With multiple layers of clear, you can get the illusion of textured dimension.

Soft Touch
Often described as Velvet Business Cards or Suede Business Cards, these laminated cards have a velvety feel like the skin of a fresh peach. Soft Touch Cards are printed on 12pt, 14pt, or 16pt, card stock, then laminated on one or both sides with 1mil scratch resistant, soft touch laminate, which gives them an increased thickness of 1 pt per side. This matte surface is writable with a fine point marker and may be writable with certain pens.

Coatings create this differentiation.

Overview

This white paper is written specifically for marketing and procurement professionals who find themselves seeking enhancements that transform campaigns and amplify results. In it, we address the primary elements to consider when planning and executing coating applications in print production:

Terminology

- Registration
- Spot coating
- Flood coating

Coating types

- Varnish
- Aqueous coating
- Ultraviolet (UV) coating

Key considerations

- Cost
- Visual impact

Defining the Fundamental Terms

An understanding of the following terminology is critical when selecting coatings to apply during the print manufacturing process: registration, spot coating and flood coating.

Registration

Relating to the alignment and placement of images or artwork on paper, registration means placing any impression in the precise position it is intended. Print operations require a high degree of precision to ensure the impression is applied to the predetermined spot on the sheet, and it helps to know the registration tolerances of various printing operations in order to optimize for the best possible visual appeal.

Registration is affected by either the setting on production equipment and/or the movement of the paper as it runs through the equipment. When positioning is not precise, it is commonly referred to as “the registration is off.” Some coatings allow for precise registration with printed art and thus are useful for spot coating within a printed product. Other coatings are more difficult and expensive to register and better lend themselves to flood coating.

Spot Coating

This term is used to describe the process of applying coating only to a certain area — or areas — to add shine and depth to those specific elements on the printed product. One of the most brilliant effects you can add to a project, spot coating typically requires precise registration to ensure the coating aligns with the printed art. While all coatings protect the paper they cover, spot coating is a truly unique effect used mainly for its decorative appeal. To see finish options for spot coating, refer to the Coatings Guide on the next page.

Flood Coating

This term is used to describe the process of applying coating to an entire sheet of paper so that all artwork is coated. With flood coating, the whole sheet and all the images get the same coating finish. Commonly used to help protect the final printed product, most flood coats can also enhance the visual appeal of it. To see finish options for flood coating, refer to the Coatings Guide on the next page.

The top image shows the separation of the specific area where spot coating will be applied to the bottom image.

PROOFING

The customer is fully responsible for final proof and layout approval prior to the printing process. International Graphics is NOT LIABLE for errors in a final product caused by any of the following reasons:

- Language and grammar
- Graphics
- Bleeds
- Damaged fonts
- Overprinting
- Form fields
- Files not built to a template or page order

Here are some tips for reviewing a proof:

- Carefully read all of the text, including headings, subheadings, body text, and captions.
- Check all of the graphics and make sure that they are clear and correctly positioned.
- Pay attention to the layout and make sure that it is consistent and visually appealing.
- Check the page order and make sure that it is correct.
- Ask someone else to review the proof with you.

If you have any questions or concerns about the proof, be sure to contact International Graphics before approving it.

SUBMITTED ARTWORK OR GRAPHICS

Please submit all artwork, designs, and images in CMYK format at a resolution of 300 DPI or higher. International Graphics is not responsible for any color shifts or image quality issues that occur due to artwork that is not submitted in the correct format.

COLOR PROOFING AND MATCHING

International Graphics cannot guarantee that the colors of your printed job will match the colors of the screen proof or the colors you see on your monitor. This is because there are many factors that can affect the appearance of printed colors, such as the type of paper and ink used, as well as the printing process itself.

If you have specific color requirements for your printed job, you should discuss them with International Graphics in advance. They may be able to provide you with a more accurate color proof or offer other solutions to help you achieve the desired results.

TRIMMING AND FOLDING

International Graphics will try its best to trim and fold each job accurately as per the order specs and artwork, but it is not responsible for trimming and folding variations of up to 0.0625 inches on each side. The design of the artwork should not rely on exact trimming or fold dimensions.

All sales are final, but we will fix our mistakes if we make them. You must notify us of any defects within 10 business days of receiving your order. We may ask you to return the printed material before issuing a reprint, credit, or refund.

International Graphics Shipping Policy

- Turnaround times are estimates and International Graphics is not liable for any consequential damages resulting from any delay in shipment or delivery.
- Orders are shipped F.O.B. to the International Graphics Plant and customers have recourse only to their selected courier for any shipping issues.
- International Graphics is not liable for delays in shipments caused by weather conditions, shipping company delays, international customs issues or any other circumstances.
- Unexpected equipment failure, malfunction or technical problems may delay the printing process. Rush charges/fees will be refunded or waived in case of delay caused by technical difficulty. However, technical difficulty will not be the grounds for order cancellation.
- Changes to the shipping or pickup method may not always be possible, especially if the order has already been packed and wrapped on courier skids. The cutoff time for requests to change from delivery to pickup or vice versa is 3:00 PM ET.

CUSTOMER CONTENT

The customer is responsible for all the content they provide, including text, images, and more. When using the service, you agree to follow local internet rules and not share harmful or inappropriate content, such as child pornography, threats, or defamatory material.

International Graphics cannot control the content customers upload, and they don't guarantee its accuracy or quality. They are not responsible for offensive or objectionable content you might come across.

The products and services are for personal use only, and you must not use them for spam or other unsolicited messages. Keep your password secure, and remember that you're responsible for any actions on your account.

International Graphics can remove content that violates the rules or is objectionable, and they can also preserve and share content as required by law or to protect their rights and users' safety.

Ultraviolet (UV) Coating

UV coating is a very glossy, shiny liquid coating applied to a printed piece and cured (dried) using intense UV light. The UV light creates a molecular reaction that hardens the coating much like an egg changes from a liquid to a solid when heat is applied. UV coatings omit no VOCs and are very environmentally friendly. Although the most expensive, UV coating offers the most dramatic effect and the highest level of protection of any coating. It can also be used as a flood or spot coating with precise registration.

Dramatically draw attention to a portion of a design by using spot UV coating.

Due to the thickness, UV coating has the highest gloss level of any coating and can also be used to create textured 3D effects. It is a clear coating and — unlike varnish — does not yellow over time. UV coatings are available in gloss, satin and dull, as well as special effects such as high rise, glitter and textured.

Coatings Guide

Coatings	Visual Impact	Ability to Apply as Spot Coating	Ability to Apply as Flood Coating	Finishes
Varnish	Low to Moderate	Excellent	Excellent	Gloss, Satin, Dull
Aqueous	High	Difficult	Excellent	Gloss, Satin, Matte, Soft Touch
UV Coating	Very High	Excellent	Excellent	Gloss, Satin, Dull, High Rise, Textured, Glitter

In Summary

It is well known that packaging and printed materials need to be functional to deliver a product or message. They also need to have attractive graphics to entice the customer to stop and look at it. Encouraging the customer to engage with and pick up your product — this is where coatings are key.

Coatings can elevate even the most creative design to a higher level of beauty and impact. They have the ability to create a customer experience that increases the perceived value of a product and creates brand separation. Invoking a customer's senses of sight and touch increases their engagement and the perceived product value. Competing brands and companies that have similar products often look for ways to differentiate themselves in the marketplace. Coating applications can be used to contrast the packaging and create brand separation amongst competitors or a set of products. For example, one could use aqueous coating on all packaging and apply added spots of UV coating to create a premium appearance on high-end products.

Marketers must continue to find ways of designing and producing materials to maximize value, brand identification and end-user experience. Take your print product to the next level of presentation and customer engagement by exploring coating options. Use the guide above to get started.
